This week's prayers incorporate our
Officer Ordination and Installation Vows of the PCUSA

Adapted from Reformed Worship Resources

Our vows include trusting in Jesus Christ our Savior, accepting the Scriptures, seeking to follow Jesus, love our neighbors, work for the reconciliation of the world, and to serve all of God's people with energy, intelligence, imagination, and love.

This day, let us pray: O risen Christ, whose life, death, and resurrection set us free from all that holds us captive, help us to put our trust in you. When our temptation to singlehandedly save the world seems greater than we can resist, call us back. Liberate us from our own agendas, and from our impatience at your work in the world that does not conform to our expectations.

O Word made flesh, help us not to lose our zeal for studying your sacred story. Make us ever vigilant against our desire to flatten the gospel message, or to make it more palatable, or to embrace novelty at the expense of an honest search for truth. Make us humble when we are arrogant; and give our words power when we feel discouraged, inarticulate, or weak.

O God, continue to knit us together. Strengthen our ties with one another, and grant us the gift of friendships wherever we minister.

Loving and reconciling One, it is a daunting task to love you, to love our neighbors, and to love ourselves. As we make our way in the midst of our many roles and tasks, recalibrate us when we find ourselves out of balance. Help us speak the truth in love so that we might be your reconcilers in the world.

O God who created the universe in an explosion of energy . . . grant us energy. O God who made this complex world of intricate interconnected parts . . . grant us intelligence. O God whose imagination called forth dinosaurs and dandelions, black holes and bobcats . . . grant us imagination. O God who is love . . . grant us love.

Almighty God, hear our prayers as we seek to faithfully serve you. Amen.
